Snow Angel Making Party

By Susan Cressy

On Sunday, February 22, everyone is invited to the Tenth Annual Snow Angel Making Party at Highlands Gate, located at 4381 Wolf Grove Road in Lanark Highlands. Taking place from 1–4PM, it's fun, it's free and it is fabulous! If you haven't made a snow angel in a while, this is your chance to join with others in the art of making a winter impression. It produces an inexplicable sense of calm and contentment — pausing to feel the coolness on your back and gazing up to see what the sky has to offer that day is a treat.

The invitation is open to everyone and anyone, so bring your friends and family. There is a big play structure with slides, horses to feed carrots to, sliding hills, and 85 acres of fields and forest to snowshoe and cross-country ski. We have some extra snowshoes that you can borrow. There will be a campfire with hot cider and good cheer, and you are welcome to bring something to cook over the fire or a treat to share.

Dress for the weather and wear a coat with a hood so you don't get snow down your neck when you are flailing around. Everyone is welcome, so spread the word and we'll see if we can fill the field with angels.

To get to 4381 Wolf Grove Road, take exit # 155 from the 417, the Carp/Almonte turn off to Highway #49 and continue on this road all the way to the farm for 40km. From Almonte, take Almonte Street through the lights at the Esso station where it turns into Wolf Grove Road, drive 20km through the flashing yellow light in Middleville, and then look for the second laneway on your left after the flashing light in Middleville.

Linda and Sam Hamilton — A New Year's Treat!

This talented Almonte couple continues to brighten our world with the way they live and the art they create. theHumm is delighted to feature the art of Linda and Sam Hamilton on our cover for the second time. Illustrator (and now art instructor) Sam headlined our April 2012 issue; paper botanical artist and teacher

by Sally Hansen

Linda decorated our May issue of 2013. The Hamiltons epitomize the raison d'être for our monthly arts paper: "...to connect and promote people and events in the small towns and rural communities of the Ottawa Valley — where the arts flourish and entertaining characters run amok!" Throughout the past fourteen years these two local artists have continued to flourish, entertain and educate!

Linda Hamilton is the creator of extraordinary paper botanicals — so extraordinary, in fact, that she was flown to Boston to install thirty of her stunning floral sculptures for an event at the home of a prominent Boston-area philanthropic couple. That fortuitous encounter has blossomed into commissions by a staggering variety of far-flung institutions such as the Isabella Stewart Gardner Museum in Boston, the Roof Crop urban agriculture initiative in Chicago, Grow Wild in Montana, and four commissions for the University of Minnesota. It's ironic but wonderful that her reputation is flourishing as successfully as an invasive weed!

Her success is well deserved. In addition to working many seasons at her mother's acres of commercial gardens in Brooke Valley near Perth, Linda worked as a florist caring for and arranging fresh and dried flowers for a decade. She also completed a degree in Visual Arts at York University, where she met Sam Hamilton who was studying graphic design. Today she is a member of the Paper Artist Collective, the Ottawa Society of Botanical Artists, and Arts Carleton Place. Her beautiful botanical artworks are for sale locally at Riverguild in Perth, General Fine Craft in Almonte, and the Mississippi Valley Textile Museum in Almonte.

The flowers on this page and the front cover are by Linda and the illustrations are by Sam, but the image above is by their son Henry!

She and Sam are inveterate lovers of and protectors of the natural world, both in their personal lives and in their artistic endeavours. In addition to her ongoing experience as a gardener, Linda does extensive research on the flora surrounding us in Lanark County. Since the couple purchased a rural piece of land about twenty minutes from their home, Linda has studied the local wildflowers and been amazed at how many are not native to our area. In April of 2021, in conjunction with her stunning display of local flora at the Mill of Kintail Museum, she told us: "Learning about the impacts of non-native and invasive species on our environment is important because they affect so many aspects of our surroundings from insect and animal life to drainage, land use and disease."

She particularly welcomes commissions to create hyper-realistic floral and plant displays that will be used for conservation education, such as her recent display of native wildflowers and noxious weeds made for Jefferson County in Montana this past year.

Another major component of Linda's career is highlighted on her website where she writes, "I love to give workshops to teach others the joy of making flowers from paper!"

She teaches both virtually (online) and in person, and has taught extensively both locally (Ottawa School of Art, Parrott Gallery in Belleville) and farther afield (virtually at The Guild of Natural Science Illustrators, Denver Botanic Gardens, Brock University), among many other assignments.

Linda and Sam appear to have inadvertently embraced the teachings of John Dewey, an American philosopher, educational reformer, and a leading figure in progressive education. Dewey taught, "The essential self is creative, and creativity is the source of all fulfillment." When Sam completed his Honours Bachelor of Design at York University/Sheridan College in 2004, he emerged with proficiency in web design and the skills needed to land a job as graphic designer for a supplier of large construction tools. He found it stifling, so he took the plunge to become a freelance graphic designer.

Today Sam is a gifted illustrator who creates some of the most endearing characters for children's books and animations I have seen. As a freelance illustrator, he has collaborated with several authors to produce books that, in my opinion, should be available to every parent helping a child learn how to enjoy and appreciate reading — and art!

Sam's presentation of his portfolio at samhdesign.com demonstrates his whimsical and magical approach to creating thoroughly captivating characters. Selling kids' books is a daunting undertaking, and Sam is overdue for the lucky break that propels him into the public's eye. In the meantime, if you know someone who needs a great logo (like theHumm's), or signage and print design for a new local feature (like Mississippi Mills' Walking Tour in Almonte), contact Sam at sam@samhdesign.com.

He is also developing educational classes in cartooning and drawing with a focus on storytelling. He noticed a lack of similar resources in the community, and his inaugural classes at the Almonte Branch of the Mississippi Mills Library have been hugely successful. Watch his website for announcements about his upcoming classes at the Almonte Old Town Hall. As Sam knows so well, there is no substitute for the thrill and pleasure of developing your own creativity.

A Family Affair

The Hamiltons' eighteen-year-old son Henry is following in his parents' footsteps. He is taking a break from school this year to explore the path his artistic career will take, and he is currently working at the Almonte Library. Next July Henry's artworks will be on display there, and theHumm predicts he will become another flourishing Ottawa Valley artist. It will be interesting to see what his younger sister, Hazel, chooses to pursue as her career.

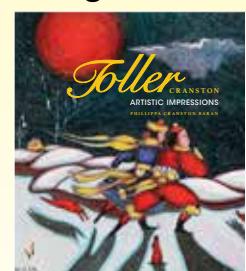

It has been a pleasure and a privilege to document this local couple's artistic achievements over the past fourteen years. Doing the research for this update, I rediscovered the joy that Sam's and Linda's art bestows on a world in sore need of comfort and joy. Do yourself a favour and spend some time on their uplifting websites, handily accessible on the reverse of their Artist Trading Card at the top of this page. Better yet, spread your wings and take a class! Happy New Year to you all.

Once upon a quiet morning on 318 Finner Court in Almonte, a bungalow townhome waited at the end of the cul-de-sac, basking in gentle light. It had watched seasons change and families come and go. Inside, sunlight warmed the open living and dining area and glinted off the kitchen's stainless steel. Patio doors opened to a private backyard—perfect for morning coffee or a summer barbecue. Every room had a purpose. The primary bedroom offered calm, with a Jack-and-Jill bath beside it that felt like an ensuite. The second bedroom shifted easily—nursery, office, or guest room—as life changed. Downstairs, the finished basement flexed with the moment: movie den, playroom, or a quiet gym where goals took shape. Outside, sounds from Augusta Street Park carried on the breeze—basketballs bouncing, neighbours chatting in the garden. The home waited, ready to welcome someone new and become home again.

Riversong Players have Big Plans for 2026

Almonte's Riversong Players is closing the chapter on a joyful and well-received holiday season following its recent production of A Christmas Story: The Musical, which brought together audiences of all ages for an evening of warmth, nostalgia, and community connection.

Audience members consistently shared how much they enjoyed the production, with children responding enthusiastically to the humour and energy of the show, while older patrons remarking that it reminded them of their own childhoods and helped usher in the Christmas spirit. Become A Friend of the Miss Mills Library!

By Barbara Carroll

The Friends of the Mississippi Mills Public Library (FoMMPL) had another record year in 2025. By the end of September we had donated a total of $21,500 to the Library, which allowed them to purchase 100 lighter-weight chairs to accommodate the audiences at their array of in-library events, a booking management system that allows patrons to book the library meeting rooms online, and an automatic checkout system that complements the existing in-person checkout. The Friends' donation also allowed the Fine-Free Status of our library to continue.

The Friends also had a record fundraising year. We made more than ever before at our play reading in the spring ($4,000), and at our early summer online auction ($8,000). This, together with some existing funds, allowed us to support the library. In the fall we had our Annual and Christmas book sales and managed to raise a record amount of around $13,500. We hold this in reserve for our 2026 donations to the library, together with the money our Friendshop generates each year.

In 2026 our plan is to focus on our two major fundraisers, the online auction and the book sales, and see how we can streamline them. The same group of volunteers have worked these events since Covid sprung us free, and we are starting to think about a succession plan for the committees of both events.

Those who work on the silent auction say they enjoy promoting local businesses, encouraging people to shop locally, and helping to build community. The volunteers on the book sale work hard but are happy doing it. Their love of books makes sorting a bit addictive. They have become very adept at finding locations for the books that don't sell so that good books don't get thrown into landfill. Those who shopped at the book sale appreciated their efforts tremendously. If you have these types of interests and some time to spare, please contact the Friends at <friends@missmillslibrary.com>. We will very happily welcome you!

A Stitch in Time: The Palestine History Tapestry

A new exhibit is coming to the Mississippi Valley Textile Museum on February 14. A Stitch in Time: The Palestine History Tapestry, hosted in partnership with Palestine Museum US, is a selection of tatreez (Palestinian embroidery) pieces from the Palestine History Tapestry — a collection of over 100 hand-stitched panels by Palestinian women in refugee camps. The tapestry will be on display at the Museum from February 14 to April 19, with an opening event on Saturday, February 14 from 1–4PM.

This is an award-winning project that platforms the embroidery skills of women to illustrate the history, culture, and humanity of the people of Palestine — forming a large-scale timeline, from Neolithic times to the present. The tapestry panels are largely stitched in the traditional cross-stitch technique of tatreez. Palestinian embroiderers mainly use tatreez to decorate clothing and other items, often in geometric designs and colours that each have their own meaning. It is a traditional craft passed down from generation to generation, incorporating stories and memories, and has become an act of resistance in the face of occupation, apartheid, and genocide.

Although some traditional designs have been used in parts of the Palestine History Tapestry, it is a further development of traditional Palestinian embroidery. It is a testament to the creativity and imagination of Palestinian embroiderers, showcasing the skill required to represent the complicated illustrative imagery of a history tapestry.

A new exhibit celebrating Palestinian Culture opens at the Mississippi Valley Textile Museum in Almonte on February 14. Above, The Right of Return by Hanan Al-Beheri [Karatiyya], Gaza; from The Palestine History Tapestry

The Mississippi Valley Textile Museum is privileged to share this exhibition with the community and hopes it will provide an opportunity for visitors to connect with the shared thread of humanity. This exhibit is generously supported by the Canadian Council of Muslim Women, the Family of Mary Ballantyne, nineSixteen, and Almonte Cozy 2 Bedroom Apartment (Airbnb).

Faisal Saleh, the Executive Director of Palestine Museum US, explains that: "At the heart of the tapestry lies tatreez, the centuries-old Palestinian embroidery tradition which UNESCO added to its Intangible Cultural Heritage list in 2021. The art of tatreez has long been the quiet chronicle of a people, passed down from mother to daughter across generations."

Michael Rikley-Lancaster, Executive Director/Curator of the Mississippi Valley Textile Museum, adds that: "There's power in textiles; in how they stretch across cultures and time as tangible pieces of history. This is why the Museum feels that A Stitch in Time is important as a way to facilitate connection and discussion, and amplify voices and stories that are being silenced. This exhibit is a celebration of Palestinian history, culture, and people, but it's also a frank reflection of what Palestinians have endured and continue to endure. It's a reflection of their resilience, and we're honoured to share this exhibit."

Frankenstein — The Monster and the Music

The 1931 Frankenstein film was eerily silent, with no music beyond the titles. Early sound technology just wasn't up to the task, and many theaters weren't equipped to handle full scores. As a result, it was released with dialogue-only tracks. However, Perth musician and composer Mark Bailey decided to write a music score to accompany the movie. Mark is a professional musician and a published composer, and his creation of this music is a major accomplishment! He captures all the excitement and foreshadowing of the movie but also sheds a fresh and sympathetic light on the character of the Frankenstein "monster". Mark explains: "I've always been a fan of this film, ever since I was a kid, and it seems like a natural transition for me to complete this task."

On February 21 at 7:30PM, a live orchestra will perform the new score as the film screens, with Ottawa composer and jazz trumpet player Rick Rangno conducting. In 1931 the film encountered censorship challenges. It was banned in Kansas and faced censorship in other states. But rest assured, it will be screened as the director James Whale intended — without any cuts.

Come out and enjoy this premiere on the large screen at St. Paul's United Church in Perth, located at 25 Gore St W. Tickets are $25 from Tickets Please (TicketsPlease.ca, 485-6434).

Experience a screening of Frankenstein with a live performance of an original score by Mark Bailey on February 21.

Books to Keep You Cozy

In 1985, Jonathan Yardley reviewed Anne Tyler's novel The Accidental Tourist in the Washington Post. He wrote: "Words fail me: one cannot reasonably expect fiction to be much better than this." Now that is pretty much the grand slam of blurbs. It's also the kind of thing I hope critics and readers will end up saying about books I'm recommending. Prognosticating is an inexact endeavour, however. At the very least, I hope to send folks into bookshops with a clearer idea of what's new and good on those shelves.

by John Pigeau

With that in mind, here's a closer look at some titles coming out in January, February, and March that, to me, look top-drawer. At the absolute minimum, I hope they will help keep you cozy and entertained until the clocks spring forward.

For fifty years, Julian Barnes has been writing literature of the highest quality. His latest book, Departure(s), a hybrid of autobiography and fiction, will be published on January 20, the day after Barnes's 80th birthday. It will be his last book. (Barnes, suffering from an incurable illness, has said as much.) By all accounts, Departure(s) marks a graceful exit. Part love story, part novelist's diary, the book is said to be a "revelatory meditation on love, death, and memory." Barnes — whose 11th novel, The Sense of an Ending, was awarded the 2011 Man Booker Prize — has always been a deeply captivating writer. His books are elegantly composed, witty, precise, often funny and devastatingly insightful. He writes truly beautiful sentences, and stories as rich and complicated as life itself. Departure(s) is almost certain to be sad, beautiful, and thoroughly engaging. I've little doubt it will be one of Barnes's best.

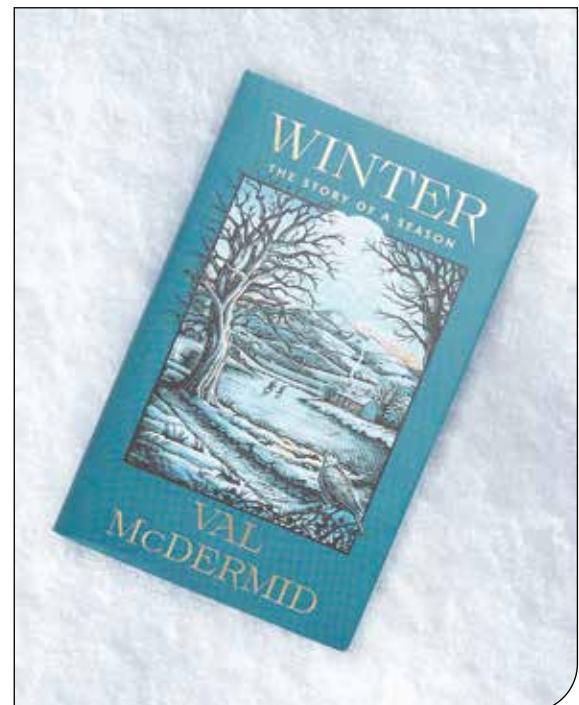

Val McDermid is a wildly popular Scottish crime writer of murderous fiction. She writes clever books apparently, awash in gore, that sell by the millions. I've never read a word she's written, but I am completely charmed by what I've read about her new book of non-fiction, Winter: The Story of a Season.

Born and raised in small-town Scotland, McDermid's Winter is an ode to memories of winters past and a heartfelt appreciation of all the season has to offer. She is a fan of a crisp cold day, of big jumpers and thick socks and scribbling in a notebook and settling in beside the fire. The world is divided in two, she writes, those who think soup is a meal and those who are wrong. Homemade soup is a comforting winter supper, McDermid was raised to believe; she calls it "central heating for the soul." She offers us intimate snapshots of her childhood: going as a toddler to see Kirkcaldy's big town-centre Christmas tree, and the memorable bonfire night when her father accidentally dropped a burning taper into a box of fireworks. She sings the praises of Scotland's winter's festivals, holidays and celebrations — the joyful times that help take the bite out of the short, frosty days, and long, windblown nights. The book is fairly slim, at 160 pages. I adore a lovely, gentle, bite-size book. Booklist calls Winter: The Story of a Season: "lyrical, often profound, and thoroughly enjoyable." It sounds to me like a wee book that might just warm even the frostiest of hearts.

A few books are getting a lot of buzz on critics' most anticipated books of 2026 lists. Several have me intrigued. But these are the sorts of books I'd want to sit down with in my local bookshop and read a bit of first. If you're like me, you usually know after reading, say, the first ten pages if a book is for you or not. Among the titles I'd take for a "test drive" are Vigil by George Saunders, and Jeanette Winterson's One Aladdin Two Lamps. Fans of both distinguished authors might wish to just take the chance. By the time you read this, both titles should be on bookshelves.

One book I know I'll be picking up is David Streitfeld's Western Star: The Life and Legends of Larry McMurtry. It's not out until March, but it should be well worth the wait. The book is being billed as the "definitive" biography of Larry McMurtry, the legendary author of Lonesome Dove, The Last Picture Show, and Terms of Endearment, among many other classic American novels. We should be in good hands with Streitfeld, too. He is a Pulitzer Prize-winning journalist and was a close friend of McMurtry's. In fact, before McMurtry died in 2021, he gave his friend "the keys to his past." This is good news, as McMurtry was an elusive figure who apparently loved making up stories about himself, and had many personas — rancher, novelist, Hollywood screenwriter, rare book collector, obsessive bookseller, rigorous defender of free speech. He was a complicated man. Streitfeld has gone to work, though; he's dug into every archive and interviewed everyone who would talk. What he'll reveal in Western Star will be revelatory and a treat to read, I'm sure. Douglas Brinkley, New York Times bestselling author of Cronkite, calls Western Star "a dazzling masterclass in the art of biography." I, for one, can't wait.

One last title I would like to recommend (though I really would like to recommend a large stack of books!) is Trina Moyle's memoir Black Bear: A Story of Siblinghood and Survival. As an environmental journalist and fire tower lookout, Moyle chronicles the path of this mesmerizing animal from her vantage point in northern Alberta. She also writes about her complicated relationship with her brother. In an increasingly conflicted world, Moyle, an acclaimed nature writer, reflects on ways we can co-exist with one another, with wildlife, and with nature. Recently, Black Bear earned a rave review in the Washington Post. It won't be the last for this dazzling memoir.

Don't Dress for Dinner

Hilarious Farce Starts the 2026 Season

Don't Dress for Dinner, by Marc Camoletti and Robin Hawdon, is the first play in The Smiths Falls Community Theatre's 2026 season. Set in the French countryside near Paris in a converted farm building, this dynamic farce borders on the ridiculous as the action explodes early with cheating spouses on both sides of a slumping marriage.

Bernard (Rob Glas) plans a romantic weekend with his secret lover Suzanne (Stephanie Korzeniowski) while his wife Jacqueline (Liz Stenberg) is visiting her mother. But when Jacqueline learns that Bernard's best friend, her secret lover Robert (Robert Del Grande), is coming, she cancels her plans and stays home. Uh oh, two secret lovers under one converted-barn roof. When the Cordon Bleu chef Suzette (Lara Klymko) arrives, Robert assumes she's Bernard's lover Suzanne — an honest mistake — and now he must convince Jacqueline that he, Robert, is not with Suzette. Suzanne (Bernard's lover) arrives next, and within moments none of them knows which one is Suzanne, which one is Suzette, who is sleeping where, how long their particular string of lies can last, and most importantly, who's cooking dinner. And if that's confusing, we're still in Act One! Soon enough, Chef Suzette's jealous, bone-crunching husband George (Dave Snider) arrives. Mayhem, double talk and a happy (enough) ending somehow ensue.

This is a funny, frenetically paced French farce that will delight audiences. The cast is full of familiar names and faces, super keen and experienced. Rehearsals are well underway and laugh-filled. Director Dave Clark, new to the area but not to directing, is delighted to add this rollicking nugget to a long list of directorial titles in his past. Prepare for some wintertime silliness as we all slip our way toward a most welcome spring. You will recognize regular contributors as well as some new cast members in this show.

Don't Dress for Dinner runs for seven performances over two weekends, with 7:30PM performances on February 13, 14, 19, 20 and 21, and 2PM matinées on February 15 and 22. Order your tickets and select your seats online at smithsfallstheatre.com. Orders can also be made at Special Greetings, 8 Russell Street East in Smiths Falls, Monday through Saturday from 9AM to 5PM. You can also call the store at 283-2244. Adult tickets are $25, student tickets are $10, and season vouchers are still available. Visit smithsfallstheatre.com to find out what's coming up at The Station Theatre.

SRO Big Band Tea Dances

The classic big band Standing Room Only (SRO) with vocalist Saffron Bradbury is staging the next Almonte Tea Dance in their 2025-2026 season on the afternoon of Sunday, January 18. "Tea dances" are afternoon dances that were popular in the '20s, '30s, and '40s, when big bands were king. They were held in hotels and, of course, featured a live band. As implied by "tea", beverages were non-alcoholic.

SRO dances feature a variety of music for ballroom and swing dancers, including swing, waltzes and Latin (cha chas, tangos, rumbas, etc.), and are held in the Auditorium on the top floor of the historic Almonte Old Town Hall, located at 14 Bridge Street in Almonte.

This beautifully preserved venue features a clean and spacious wooden dance floor, natural lighting, and wonderful acoustics. Doors open at 1PM and dancing is from 1:30-4PM. Admission is $20 per person at the door (cash only). Reservations are not required.

Light refreshments including delicious treats and a range of non-alcoholic beverages will be available at very reasonable prices (cash only). The Almonte Old Town Hall has its own parking lot, and there's lots of additional parking on nearby streets. For more information, visit the band's website srobigband.ca or Facebook page.

The remaining Sunday afternoon Almonte Tea Dances are scheduled for March 1 and March 29.

Mississippi Mills Film Society Presents DJ Ahmet

Don't miss the first TIFF movie in the Mississippi Mills Film Society's Winter/Spring 2026 series! DJ Ahmet will be screened at the Almonte Legion on Sunday, February 22 at 2PM.

Directed by Georgi M. Unkovski, DJ Ahmet tells the story of a 15-year-old Yuruk boy from a remote Macedonian village who escapes into music amidst parental expectations, societal conservatism, and forbidden love for a promised girl. This movie garnered multiple nominations and awards at film festivals around the world. And now it's coming to Almonte!

Toronto-based movie critic Peter Howell writes: “The bleat goes on for music-loving teen sheepherder Ahmet after his flock invades a rave and TikTok notoriety ensues. He has bigger things to worry about: a grieving dad who wants to pull him out of school, a younger brother who refuses to speak, and a major crush on a girl who is about to be married. Georgi M. Unkovski's coming-of-age comedy finds much to smile about in a North Macedonian village where conservative traditions clash with modern times.”

Tickets are $15 per film (fees included) from Tickets Please (TicketsPlease.ca, 485-6434), and a series pass to all three is available for only $42. The next two movies will be shown on March 22 and April 19. Follow the Mississippi Mills Film Society on Facebook for all the details.

All proceeds from these screenings are donated to the Mississippi Mills Public Library, Almonte and Pakenham branches. The Film Society gratefully acknowledges their partnership with Film Circuit, presented by TIFF, and its sponsors and supporters.

The first Mississippi Mills Film Society offering in 2026 will be the Macedonian movie DJ Ahmet

Arts CP Call for Artists

Arts Carleton Place invites applications for booth space at its signature juried fine art show, taking place on May 2 and 3 at the Carleton Place Arena. They are looking for 45–55 talented artists, and their application deadline is midnight on January 31. This year's show will showcase primarily wall art (oil, acrylic, aquarelle, charcoal, fibre, mixed media, watercolour, pencil art, photography, etc.). Other forms will also be considered, including pottery, glass art, jewellery, sculptures, metal and woodwork.

The judges' decision is final, and a waiting list may be compiled. The criteria may include visual appeal, originality, creativity, use of medium, degree of difficulty, due diligence, composition, use of colour, attention to detail, ability to provoke thought, and quality of presentation. This year's show will once again feature fantastic door prizes, free parking and free admission for visitors.

Be sure to send quality images of the art you intend to exhibit at the show. If you plan to exhibit more than wall art, you must include images of the other art forms you plan to present. All work presented at the Exhibition must be the artist's own original creation, and participants must be members of Arts Carleton Place. More information about the show and the application process can be found at the Arts Carleton Place website <artscarletonplace.com/2026-acpfineartsale>.

Finding Hope Despite the Despair

On Monday, January 19 at 6:30PM, CFUW Perth & District presents a Zoom with Canadian feminist lawyer and women's advocate Pamela Cross. Pamela will speak about "Finding Hope Despite the Despair: Moving Forward to End Gender-Based Violence".

In this powerful talk, Pamela draws on more than 30 years of frontline experience in the violence against women movement to explore why our legal systems continue to fail so many survivors — and where real hope for change can still be found.

At a time when gender-based violence is more visible than ever, she will challenge us to think beyond the law, and toward a society-wide approach to building communities that are safe for everyone.

This is a timely, honest, and hopeful conversation you won't want to miss. Zoom details will be provided upon registration — please visit <cfuwperth.org> for details or to register.

Luna Blackwood at the Corridor Gallery

Until February 21, the Almonte Library's Corridor Gallery is pleased to present artwork by Luna Blackwood (Melissa Labrecque), an Indigenous multimedia artist and photographer. Luna's work has a strong focus on realism and abstract realism. She loves to draw and paint in darker tones with highly detailed subjects that portray deep emotions, and incorporates animals into her pieces, often wolves or ravens. Much of her artwork includes hidden Indigenous elements, and she has recently adopted a woodland style with bold lines and vibrant colours.

Her goal is to portray emotion through her pieces and to connect to people on a deeper level, allowing her to heal through art.

Works by Luna Blackwood will be on display at Almonte Library until Feb. 21

At the age of fourteen, she started her artistic career with graphite realism and began selling commission drawings by fifteen. After years of developing her skills, she moved on to charcoal and abstract realism painting in her early twenties. She has recently expanded her skills to include digital art, animation, Photoshop, and photography.

Luna now teaches private art workshops known as "HeARTworks", where she shares her experience and connects with her audience regarding struggles from her own personal life. The point of HeARTworks is learning to heal through art. Allowing others to feel their emotions and let them know that life still has meaning, even if they don't see it.

For purchase inquiries, please contact the artist at <Luna64black@gmail.com>.

Personal Touch Country Gifts

Welcoming a New Business in Gillies Corners

By Colleen Gray

Just a short drive from Carleton Place, Perth and Smith Falls, there's a new shopping experience blooming in the snow at 1127 Perth Road. Sherrie and Dan Imbeau quietly opened Personal Touch Country Gifts on November 1, 2025, extending an invitation to local artists and craftspeople to showcase their items for sale.

Originally from Atlanta, Georgia and Sudbury, Sherri and Dan are a retired trauma nurse and border services worker who have long dreamed of owning a fine quality gift store where they could showcase local talent and connect with customers. Good fortune allowed them to purchase and set up shop in the historical brick Methodist church and parsonage. The impressive open architecture adds a reverent ambiance to lovely items carried in the store and is worth taking the time to visit.

Along with an impressive array of gift items, Sherrie and Dan offer professional sublimation services to the public and businesses. Sublimation is a process that allows vibrant images to be transferred and embedded onto a surface with clean, crisp lines. Come and discuss your professional needs or gift ideas with them. Dan is a skilled wood artist whose talent is clearly evident from the moment you walk up to the impressive carved front doors.

Along with showcasing local talent, Personal Touch Country Gifts is the newest brick and mortar location for the Art for Aid Shop's beautiful art gifts (artforaidshop.ca). This local initiative run by long-time area artist Colleen Gray helps to provide free access to art supplies for resource-challenged Indigenous schools in fly-in communities across Canada.

Drop in to shop, chat, and explore this wonderful new business. They are open from 10AM to 5PM every day except Mondays and Tuesdays, with plenty of parking and more than enough joy to fill up your basket. You can also find and follow them on Facebook.

Petra's Chocolate Bourbon /Rum Cake

The Good Food Column

This month's recipe was a special request from a reader who used to buy the cake for her husband's birthday. Petra Graber writes: "This was The Good Food Co. twist on a 'mud' cake. I had a terrible habit of using coffee or liquor to pep up chocolate recipes — this one has both!"

by Petra Graber

Chocolate Bourbon /Rum Cake

2 cups all-purpose flour
1 teaspoon baking soda
 $\frac{1}{4}$ teaspoon salt
5 ounces unsweetened OR extra dark chocolate
1 cup unsalted butter
1 cup strong coffee
 $\frac{1}{2}$ cup bourbon OR dark rum
 $\frac{1}{2}$ cup buttermilk OR sour cream
3 eggs + 1 yolk
2 cups white sugar
1 teaspoon vanilla

- Grease a bundt OR angel food pan and dust with cocoa;
- Combine flour, baking soda, and salt in a bowl and set aside;
- Melt chocolate and butter together on medium in microwaveable bowl or in saucepan on medium-low heat;

- Stir in coffee, liquor, and buttermilk and set aside;
- With electric mixer, beat together eggs, sugar, and vanilla until smooth;
- Add $\frac{1}{2}$ of flour mixture and blend;
- Add $\frac{1}{2}$ melted chocolate mixture and blend;
- Alternate beating in flour and chocolate mixtures, scraping as needed, until smooth;
- Turn batter into prepared pan and bake at 325 F for approximately 50 minutes, or until skewer inserted in cake comes out clean — do not overbake!
- Cool and turn out onto platter;
- Dust with cocoa or cover with ganache (below).

NOTE: the cake can be frozen successfully before icing, and the recipe works well for cupcakes or split into two 9" round pans and filled and iced with lightly-sweetened whipped cream — try adding some fresh raspberries or strawberries and decorating the sides with chopped dark chocolate.

Chocolate Ganache

8 ounces (226 g) dark chocolate (not extra dark), finely chopped
1 cup 35% cream, heated

- Stir hot cream into chopped chocolate until smooth;
- Spoon over cake.

Ganache leftovers will keep in the fridge for at least 1 month — scoop out what you need and heat on low to bring back to drizzling consistency.

Goin' to Hadestown

Mudds Youth Bring Greek Myth to the Stage

This February, the Mississippi Mudds youth take on Hadestown, Teen Edition, a bold, nearly sung-through musical filled with tight harmonies and a jazzy groove. The show is a modern retelling of the Greek myths of Orpheus and Eurydice, and Hades and Persephone, weaving themes of love, faith, and defiance into a powerful story about choosing hope in a harsh world.

Set in a post-apocalyptic landscape that blends the feel of a lively speakeasy with an industrial underworld, Hadestown, Teen Edition features haunting songs such as Anyway the Wind Blows, Way Down Hadestown, and Wait for Me. The result is a timeless theatrical experience that feels not only mythical but also contemporary.

"Who doesn't hope for a better tomorrow?" says director Bobby Martin. "Hadestown captures that raw emotion — the hope for a new day. Each character brings a different perspective on that hope, and we learn that not everyone's hope can be realized."

The production showcases the musicality, diversity, and energy audiences have come to expect from Mississippi Mudds. Theatre-goers are invited to join this talented young cast on a mythical journey down the "Road to Hell" and back.

Hadestown, Teen Edition is the second major musical of the Mudds season, following a sold-out run of Annie in November. Upcoming productions include Broadway Showstoppers in March and the hit comedy The Play That Goes Wrong in May.

Tickets for Hadestown are selling fast. Don't miss this opportunity to see a local youth cast bring one of Broadway's most unique musical experiences to life. Get your tickets at Mudds.TicketsPlease.ca.

What is an Art Quilt?

Studio Art Quilt Associates (SAQA) is an international organization dedicated to promoting the art quilt — art that is layered and stitched, or that references layering and stitching. This broad definition allows many techniques, materials and styles to be used by artists in their creations. SAQA holds many juried shows exhibited in art galleries and museums around the world, as well as more local exhibits. A regional group named the Land Between Pod started in 2018 with members in the Kawarthas and surrounding areas. This is part of the geographical area known as the Land Between, the southern edge of the Canadian Shield. During the pandemic lockdown meetings moved online, and SAQA members from across Ontario, Quebec and even Europe were welcomed to join the pod.

In 2024 the group chose "The Land Between" as the theme for a challenge. The objective was to explore what this meant to members personally, not just as a specific physical area. How does it reflect in their art? What social, economic and environmental issues do they face? Are they "between" in their work — starting to transition from one style to another?

All work is mounted on a 12" x 12" artist canvas. Participating artists used a variety of designs, materials and techniques. Some are abstract, some are representational, some are dimensional, some include photography or painting. Some use natural or synthetic dyes. One incorporates a map, another one bra cups. Some are heavily hand or machine embroidered. All have some form of stitching on fabric.

The Land Between exhibit is on display at the Perth Public Library until the end of

March, during the hours that the library is open. Additional art quilts are included in the Perth show due to available space. Some of the quilts are available for sale. While viewers are normally requested not to touch quilts on display, there is one quilt at this show that can be touched. It is made from used denim clothing and has a zillion pockets on it!

Anita Payne De Gaia will host tours of the exhibit on Saturday, January 31 at 1PM, Thursday, February 5 at 1PM, Saturday, February 28 at 2PM and Tuesday, March 31 at 4PM. Registration is required at the Perth & District Union Library website perthunionlibrary.libcal.com/calendar.

On March 31, the last day of the exhibit, several of the artists will be at the library for a "Meet the Artists" event from 5-7PM. Come to the Perth Library to find out what an art quilt is!

Valley Youth Sing High and Low!

By Helen Rutledge

As Dr. Seuss himself said: "Think left and think right and think low and think high. Oh, the thinks you can think up if only you try!"

We can't be sure, but it's possible that he was thinking about children and the joy of singing when he spoke about thinking low and high. The Valley Youth Singers like to think of fun, teamwork, and music education all rolled into wonderful experiences for kids! Valley Youth Singers, a choir for Perth and area children, was launched in September of 2024. Conducted by Alana Cliften and accompanied by Val Leavitt, the choir is now preparing for the next term starting in February.

Valley Youth Singers operates from two locations, so families may choose to register their children for Perth or Lanark. It's made up of three choirs: "Da Capo" choir for children aged 6-8, "Allegro" choir for ages 9-13, and "Animato" choir for ages 7-13 in Lanark. The choirs will come together for a dress rehearsal and concert in May at St. James Anglican Church in Perth.

The cost to join Valley Youth Singers is $125 per term, and bursaries are available to families who would benefit from financial assistance. For more information, or to enquire about registration, please email the choir at <valleyyouthsingers@gmail.com>.

Almonte in Concert Offerings for 2026

There are still three exceptional shows left in the 2025/26 Almonte in Concert season. Their most recent concert, A Piano for Christmas, sold out, so grab your calendars now and your tickets soon!

First up, on Sunday, January 25 at 2PM, is All the Mornings with Elinor. Alone on stage, surrounded by her string instruments, JUNO Award-winning cellist Elinor Frey invites you to discover each one's distinct personality, tones and colours while she tells their story. A reference to the film Tous les matins du monde, All the Mornings with Elinor is a recital both intimate and rich in discovery, highlighting the most beautiful pages by Bach, Dall'Abaco, Telemann and Tartini, as well as the piece Les Pleurs (Sainte-Colombe) excerpted from the film.

On Saturday, March 7 at 7:30PM, you won't want to miss Bridge & Wolak's Scandalous Romantics — a hilarious tabloid take on stories behind the most celebrated music stars across genres and their spectacular lapses in judgement! Co-written with CBC's Tom Allen, Michael Bridge (digital accordion and piano) and Kornel Wolak (clarinet and piano) expose the lust, pride, and envy that fuelled some of the greatest music every written. Bridge & Wolak dazzle with virtuosity, down-to-earth humour, and their original arrangements in an explosive program steeped in contemporary culture.

Finally, Saturday, April 11 brings the Vnukowski/Odin Quartet to town for In Schumann's Footsteps: Dances, Dreams and Remembrances. The program includes Robert Schumann's monumental Piano Quintet in E-flat major Op. 44 and award-winning Canadian composer Simon Bertrand's Imprecise Memories, among other works. On Saturday, March 7, the Jeff Rogers Trio will perform at the historic Carleton Place Town Hall Auditorium at 7:30PM. Tickets are $25 per person and are available at online.carletonplace.ca/jeff-rogers-trio.

Singer/songwriter Jeff Rogers' unmistakably soulful voice often evokes weighty comparisons to the past — whether that's Stevie Wonder, Ray Charles or even Otis Redding — however, his tone, range, phrasing and sincerity all make him unmistakably contemporary and totally original. Jeff has toured internationally and is in demand as a session player. He has also been a member of renowned country rock band The Cooper Brothers for over a decade.

The Carleton Place Town Hall Auditorium is once again becoming a hub for live musical entertainment throughout the year. This intimate venue provides breathtaking acoustics as well as the opportunity for up close and personal interactions with the artists. Tickets for the Jeff Rogers Trio are on sale now and will sell out, so don't delay!

Los Desperados

Then on Saturday May 16, Los Desperados will bring the Eagles' greatest hits to the stage. Experience hits like Hotel California, Take It Easy, Desperado, Lyin' Eyes and Life in the Fast Lane, performed with the lush harmonies and guitar work that made the Eagles legendary. Every note is delivered with deep respect for the originals, creating a live experience that feels both nostalgic and fresh. Showtime is 7:30PM, and tickets are available online at online.carletonplace.ca.

Call to Artists: The Tunic Show

Organizer Laura Jean Starkey invites artists and makers from all disciplines to take part in a large-scale, immersive exhibition titled The Tunic Show, taking place on August 1 at the Mississippi Valley Textile Museum in Almonte. This ambitious exhibition will bring together creators from all walks of life, each contributing a single, artist-designed tunic. The vision is to fill the museum hall with mannequins dressed in tunics that reflect the individuality, creativity, and stories of their makers, creating a powerful visual statement about the diversity of contemporary creative practice.

Artists of all kinds are encouraged to participate, including but not limited to potters, painters, photographers, embroiderers, knitters, crocheters, printers, assemblage artists, drawers, and carvers. The idea for the show grew out of a conversation between Laura Jean Starkey and Deborah Guthrie while discussing a project involving dyed and decorated tunics. From that moment came a larger inspiration: to create a space that showcases what artists can bring to life from nothing, using a shared form as a starting point.

In this exhibition, the tunic acts as the vessel, and the artist becomes the storyteller. There are intentionally very few rules. All tunics will be handmade by Laura Jean Starkey using linen or cotton; painters who prefer canvas may request a canvas tunic instead. Artists are free to alter, embellish, cut, stitch, paint, dye, print, or otherwise transform the tunic in any way they choose.

Registration Deadline

Registration is open until January 31, with limited spots available. Once registered, artists will receive their tunic on or just before the deadline, making this an ideal winter project. Finished tunics are due by July 15. Artists may register more than once and create multiple tunics, provided each piece includes its own registration and display fee.

Participants are asked to bring their finished tunic along with a mannequin or upright display to Almonte on August 1. For artists who are unable to attend in person, tunics may be mailed in and will be displayed on their behalf. Set-up will take place on the morning of the show.

Each tunic should include a display card with the artist's name, price, and a short bio. Adding the story behind the tunic is highly encouraged. All tunics will be offered for sale during the exhibition, with pricing determined by the artist and 100 % of sales going directly to the creator. Tunics not for sale, or those sold prior to the show, will be marked with a red dot and will still be exhibited and eligible for awards.

Pictured above is a linen tunic currently under construction. After hand-dyeing it with walnut ink, artist Laura Jean Starkey is adding linen leaves and lace from her mother's 1957 wedding dress.

Laura invites artists and makers from all disciplines to participate in a Tunic Show at the Mississippi Valley Textile Museum later this year.

The exhibition will include People's Choice Awards, voted on by visitors during the show. Prizes include $1,000 for first place, $500 for second place, and $500 for third place, announced at the end of the event. If a tunic is unfinished by the deadline, it is still welcome and may be displayed as "under construction," honouring the reality of creative life.

The registration fee is $100 per tunic, payable by e-transfer to laurajeanstarkey@yahoo.ca or online at lauras-shop.square.site. The fee includes the handmade tunic, exhibition participation, promotion, vernissage, Instagram promotion, posters, a show brochure, and food and wine at the event.

Artists are encouraged to share this call widely. Questions may be directed to Laura Jean Starkey by email.

Suzie Ungerleider in the Library After Dark

Suzie Ungerleider (formerly Oh Susanna) returns to the Perth & District Library for a Library After Dark concert on January 30. Library After Dark is a special fundraising concert series that offers a chance to see top-notch artists in an intimate and uncommon space.

After 23 years away chasing dreams in Toronto, three-time JUNO nominee Suzie Ungerleider returned home to Vancouver, drawn by its salt air and towering trees. Her new album, Among the Evergreens, is a deeply personal journey through time, tracing her path from youthful dreams to the wisdom of experience.

"It's about being like a tree with all those rings around you, the layers of your life telling you who you are and where you've been," she says. Imagery of the outdoors, of green valleys and trees shedding their leaves, infuses this new collection that is garnering high praise as one of her best.

Uncut Magazine describes Among the Evergreens as "thoughtful, luminous, expressive", and featured it as Americana Album of the Month for June 2025. Mojo Magazine's four-star review glowed that these ten new songs "are about as sweet as folk-Americana comes."

Suzie brings her stories to life with her captivating voice and raw honesty. Inviting you into her world through poetic lyricism and mesmerizing melodies, she shares her experiences from teenagehood to motherhood. "Here I am making songs back among the evergreens, a prodigal daughter, who is now a mother, asking who was I then and who am I now, where have I been and what did I learn along the way?"

Expect an evening of heartfelt music and vivid storytelling that lingers long after the last note fades, leaving you among the evergreens, dreaming and remembering.

Doors open at 7PM and music starts at 7:30PM. There will be a cash bar, featuring a selection of wine and beer generously donated by the Perth Brewery. Tickets are $30 and available online in advance at perthunionlibrary.ca/library-after-dark or at the door. A charitable receipt for $15 will be issued for each ticket.

Meditation in Clay

How Joanne Nimmo Bulsara Helps Us Rediscover Creativity

When artist Joanne Nimmo Bulsara and I set out to design a workshop pairing clay sculpting with guided meditation, we weren't sure the concept would land. Still, we believed that a practice grounded in the hands and another anchored in the mind might enable a deeper, unique creative experience. We discovered that meditating while making encourages people not just to make something, but to feel something shift as they do.

by Kim Lulashnyk

For Joanne, creativity has always been elemental. "As far back as I can remember, I had a pencil or a crayon in my hand," she says. Growing up in a challenging home environment, she found her refuge outdoors. The woods and lake near her childhood home became her sanctuary. What she didn't know then was that she was already meditating, finding stillness, breathing with the natural world, and listening inward long before she ever encountered formal teachings.

Clay artist Joanne Nimmo Bulsara

That changed when she was sixteen. A meditation teacher appeared at her high school (quite literally sitting alone in the gymnasium) and invited curious students to join her. Joanne instantly recognized the experience. "I told her afterward, 'I've been doing this since I was a little girl.'" That simple moment ignited a lifelong inquiry into spirituality and consciousness. Joanne explored Christianity, Buddhism, Hinduism, and Zoroastrianism, always searching, always asking. Throughout, her sketching remained the throughline, the place where her questions took shape.

Like so many artists, Joanne's artistic path has been anything but linear. For twenty years, she worked as an artist-blacksmith alongside her husband and children. They forged large sculptures, functional ironwork, and one-of-a-kind commissions, entirely self-taught and fueled by intuition and craft. When serious illness ended that chapter, Joanne returned to other materials; first to stone carving, which she took to as though she had done it for a century, and later to clay and smaller sculptural forms that suited her evolving physical abilities.

However, the most transformative evolution was not in the medium but in the method. Joanne realized that meditation wasn't simply preparation for creativity; it was the heart of her creative process. She began to practice dropping into a meditative state, asking her consciousness for guidance and listening. She speaks to the work, follows its cues, and feels her way forward. "It becomes a conversation," she says. "It's joy. It's connection. It's energy."

This insight became the seed of the meditation and clay workshop. In a culture that often treats art as a product, Joanne wanted to share a practice that reveals how creativity can ground and restore. Each session begins with a guided meditation, gently settling participants into stillness before they touch the clay. Joanne works with clay in her own stone-carving practice, but she also chooses it because it is drawn directly from the earth and provides immediate grounding. The simple act of holding it brings people fully into the present moment. As fingers begin to shape the surface, self-criticism softens into curiosity. Participants stop asking, "Am I doing this right?" and instead ask, "What wants to come through?"

This shift is the magic Joanne hopes to offer. "I didn't want the workshop to feel like therapy or to bring up sadness," she explains. "I wanted people to discover joy — real, grounded joy — in the act of creating."

A recent session at Stone Manor Studios proved how powerful the combination can be. Participants relaxed, laughed, and shaped their clay with a freedom that surprised them. Each sculpture was different, but all carried a quiet sincerity. I believe that people left feeling lighter, more settled, and deeply connected to the creative process. Joanne herself was moved. "I knew I could teach meditation, and I knew I could teach sculpture," she says. "But seeing both come together, seeing people feel joy through their own hands, that was incredible."

Today, Joanne continues her own creative work with the same sense of wonder. She is currently exploring multi-material pieces that combine stone, deer bone, and wood, each one created through her meditative dialogue with the materials. "Everything I create now comes from the heart," she says. "If it resonates with someone, wonderful. If it doesn't, that's perfectly fine. The work needs to be true."

Her work can be followed through Raven's Eye Studio on Instagram and Facebook, though she'll be the first to tell you that what matters most is not the finished sculpture but the energy and awareness that shape it.

For those interested in exploring this approach, Joanne plans to offer additional meditation-and-clay experiences in early spring 2026, with the possibility of a special session for the Winter Solstice 2026. If the recent workshop is any indication, these gatherings won't just teach people how to sculpt. They will offer something much rarer, a chance to pause, breathe, and rediscover the deep, quiet creativity that lives within us all.

Indigenous River Project Moves Ahead in CP

By Colleen Gray

This summer, construction for a beautiful installation at Riverside Park in Carleton Place will begin, thanks to the Town's approval for the funding required to build "The 4 Directions Stones". The installation will honour the historical and existing presence of the Algonquin Nation along the banks of the Mississippi River. Historically, the river has been an important travel and trade route for the Algonquin people.

Under the guidance of the planning committee, the installation will be carried out by WRC Contracting, who also installed "The 7 Gifts" at Riverfront Park in Almonte. The committee is comprised of both Indigenous and non-Indigenous representation and has been in the planning and development stage for three years.

This impressive installation will consist of four pillar-styled arrangements of armour stone facing the four cardinal directions. The stones will be embellished with symbols and language pertaining to the Algonquin culture with a nod to the Mississippi River. Alongside the installation will be a plaque detailing the meaning behind the symbols on the stones. In addition to the stones, along the river's edge a large plaque will detail the Mississippi's historically significant place names, with a bench created by local woodworker Robert Manson as part of the installation. This powerful acknowledgement will serve to inspire and educate people visiting the park and attending cultural ceremonies.

The 4 Directions Stones planning committee is deeply grateful to the Town of Carleton Place for supporting this initiative. Follow the progress on the committee's Facebook page @Mississippi River Gathering Place, or email 4directionscp@gmail.com for more information.

Load Up the Calendar!

Good grief, we're barely through with 2025 yet, and already I've got things on the calendar way into spring. I'm supposed to be signing up for April events, and I haven't finished with December yet. By April I should be thinking about the garden, and here I am shovelling snow — and yes, I know we've already had enough, but there's more to come, count on that.

by Glenda Jones

I intended to uncomplicate my life by doing less in the new year, and now I see that's not going to happen. We go into January believing we have a clean slate when in reality we only have a quick Christmas break before we're right back into our routine, one that we chose in September when we were desperate to find new activities.

If we were suddenly to leap off the merry-go-round of our own making, we'd soon find ourselves mired in ennui and longing to get out of the house and into our old routine, or if nothing else, to find a new activity. Sure, it's tempting to get all virtuous and decide to go to the gym, but you probably know that you'll find excuses to skip sessions long before the membership runs out. We're much better off to pick up where we left in mid-December and leave the big changes to the real New Years, which we all know is September 1.

January? What is the compulsion to schedule ourselves way ahead? Well, it gives us a reason to get up in the morning. Knowing the day holds some promise of purpose increases our resolve to make the best of it. We can think ahead to how the event will play out. Maybe we think of what we'll wear, who we'll see, even how much it's going to cost. Meeting someone for coffee takes a whole lot of phone calls and emails to get a date compatible for both of us, but once we do, it's on the calendar, and heaven help circumstances that interfere.

February? Putting something on the calendar months in advance gives us planning time. Maybe we need to improve our skills... which involves taking a course. Purpose again: every class gives us the opportunity to learn and grow towards the final goal. The dog trialling season will start up again in a month, and I've got a long way to go. Diligence, patience, and yes, a whole lot of practice! Whatever I can learn in the meantime will be useful.

March? Already? Time to put the skills to good use and hope the practice pays off. Are travel plans in the offing? Have you booked the resort for the summer? Better get at it now before all the best spots are taken. There might be icicles hanging from the eaves, but in a few months it's going to be a scorcher and you'll want to be on a lake somewhere cool. Get those weeks written into the calendar, and pray the weather will cooperate. Then you can let your imagination take over while you declare "I can't wait for..." It'll make the experience even better when you've savoured it for months in advance.

Anticipating events, even if they aren't particularly exciting, provides focus. I knew a lady who said: "I can't die yet, I've got bridge next week", and by golly, she was there at the table with the best cards. Yes, "places to go, people to see" provides incentive one day to the next.

So what do we do if our best plans go off the rails? We regroup our resources and make a new plan. The gap in the calendar might be a gift of time we didn't anticipate when we can play hooky for a while. Even if the derailed date is doomed by weather or circumstances, we can salvage some shred of purpose from it.

We've got several calendars around here, but we rely on the computer one and the little notes tucked into our garden journal. Lord help us if we forget to enter something, because it'll disappear into the ether. I thought I didn't need reminders, but I'm glad to see them pop up on the email if only to confirm what I already know. Further, it prevents things from overlapping and me from having to make weak excuses for forgetting. That annoys me.

So there now, I'm turning a new page to January 2026, with many events already planned for the next four months. They're on the calendar, in my journal, and waiting. I'll do my best to arrive at each of the dates with some degree of readiness. I've still got plenty of time to pencil in lots of new things too, so "I'll have my people call your people" and we'll try to get together some time before September, when it's good for both of us.

Neighbourly ReUse in Lanark Highlands

By Jeff Mills

In response to the recent closure of the Hub's Rebound Centre in Almonte, a small group of engaged citizen advocates has rallied in Mississippi Mills. By examining other nearby community programs that are successfully reducing the amount of waste sent to landfill by returning reusable items to the community, this group is looking for future solutions in Mississippi Mills. They are also actively addressing the closure of the Hub's Rebound.

"Reduce, Reuse, Recycle." The 3-R mantra has been adopted over the decades as human-generated waste continues to threaten our environment. This group wants to learn from other communities about their successful programs of waste reduction and reuse. This article features the McDonald's Corners ReUse Centre in Lanark Highlands.

"I was taking my garbage to the town dump one day when I saw five computers in a pile ready to be buried with the waste," explains Lanark Highlands resident Lynn Parks. "I needed a computer at the time, so I fished out the newest one from the pile.

'Someone should do something,' I said to myself." From this humble beginning came a very successful citizen-led waste diversion program. Lynn contacted her friend Chris Anstead, and then many other citizens rallied after a simple poster was shared throughout the community.

In the early days of their efforts, areas at some municipal waste facilities were designated for materials that could be reused and were free for the taking. Then in October 2009, these self-described "ReUsers," with support from the Municipality of Lanark Highlands, opened the facility at the McDonald's Corners waste site. Local businesses, tradespeople and volunteer carpenters came together and constructed a building on the site. ReUse had a proper home, with storage, sorting area, shelves, and a volunteer program. This marked the formal start of the centre as a place where items could be accepted, sorted, and offered back to the community free of charge, instead of being thrown away.

In 2010, the municipality passed Bylaw 2010-1061 — "ReUse Centre Operating Procedures" to formalize the relationship between the volunteer ReUsers and the municipality. It established rules for how the centre would run, ensuring "fair use" of the centre by residents — meaning it set out how goods are accepted, sorted and made available, specifically prohibiting profit-making from goods taken from the centre — no one is to resell for personal gain. The operation was to be volunteer based, not a commercial venture, but supported by the municipality. Lanark Highlands offered space at their landfill site and some funding for repairs and utilities, while the volunteer ReUsers would run the day-to-day operations.

In short order the efforts of the ReUsers showed signs of success as they collected and diverted goods such as books, clothing, furniture, small appliances, electronics, housewares and craft materials, sports and garden equipment, windows, doors and more from landfill. In 2009, an estimated 16 tons of reusable materials were diverted from landfill; in 2010 the number more than doubled to 37 tons; in 2011 it grew to approximately 75 tons; and recent counts have this figure at over 100 tons per year.

"Our partnership with Lanark Highlands and being here at their waste site is key," shares Lynn. "We don't have garbage pick-up in the Highlands, so everyone has to come here with their waste anyways. We make it easy for them to dispose of their reusable items. Most people take other things they can use home with them when they leave."

"It's an amazing place of social connection," she adds. "Some days there are cars lined up at the gate before we open. Neighbours meet neighbours. It really works because of the dedicated ReUser volunteers, and oh yeah — everything is free!"

If you are concerned about the waste diversion of reusable goods in Mississippi Mills, send a message to <After.Rebound@gmail.com> to join our email group for updates and watch local media for further articles describing what other communities in our region are doing.

The McDonald's Corners ReUse Centre's winter hours (September 15 to May 14) are the same as their landfill: Thursday 2–5PM, Saturday 9AM to 1PM, and Sunday 12–5PM. Please note: the drop-off of reusable goods at the McDonald's Corners ReUse Centre is limited to Lanark Highland residents.

Join MMLT on Nature's Path to Wellness

The Mississippi Madawaska Land Trust (MMLT) was founded on and is guided by two core principles: conserving ecologically important lands and encouraging people to experience the healing power of nature. In today's fast-paced, screen-focused society, many have become disconnected from nature — often at the expense of mental and emotional wellbeing.

In partnership with Pinegrove Productions, and with support from the Perth and District Community Foundation and MMLT individual donors, MMLT has produced a short video entitled Nature's Path to Wellness.

Through real-life stories and experiences, the video explores how simply engaging with nature can start you down the path to wellness. It reveals how nature nurtures and rejuvenates, offering a free and accessible way to feel more balanced, emotionally resilient, and better able to care for yourself and others.

To mark its release, the public is invited to join those featured in the film for a screening and conversation. Attendees will have the opportunity to share stories, reflect on what nature means to them, and learn how small moments of nature connection — using all the senses — can be powerfully restorative.

The screening takes place on Sunday, February 1 from 2–4PM at Studio Theatre Perth, which is located at 63 Gore St. E. There is no charge to attend, but registration is requested via TicketsPlease.ca. For further information, please contact Mary Vandenhoff at vandenhoff@bell.net or 278-2939.

January is Alzheimer's Awareness Month

Help Raise Awareness and End Stigma!

Submitted by The Alzheimer Society Lanark Leeds Grenville

The Alzheimer Society Lanark Leeds Grenville invites you to participate in this year's Alzheimer's Awareness Month. There are approximately 4,000 people living with dementia in Lanark, Leeds, and Grenville.

Last year alone, we had over 12,000 visits to our Day Program (offered in five locations). Each visit equals a 6-hour day. That is 72,000 hours of care we offered families living with dementia. In our Overnight Weekend Respite Program, we had 600 overnight stays (in two locations).

"Forget No One" is the Alzheimer Society's national anti-stigma campaign for January 2026. It focuses on shifting perceptions of dementia, encouraging early help-seeking, and reinforcing that people living with dementia — and those who support them — deserve to be seen, heard, and remembered.

Throughout January you can participate in Awareness Month in several ways. You can "Light it Up Blue" and use blue lights or décor to shine a light on dementia in our community either at home or at your place of businesses. We are pleased to have the town of Carleton Place; the town of Smiths Falls, and Heritage House Museum in Smiths Falls committed to lighting blue this month!

You can also keep an eye out for community displays with helpful information about dementia, local supports, and resources at places like the Carleton Place, Mississippi Mills and Brockville libraries. To request a digital toolkit of resources to set up your own display, please reach out to Sarah at <scavanagh@alzllg.ca>.

You can purchase (by donation) a paper forget-me-not flower and dedicate it to someone you love at a participating retailer. We are grateful to the Lighthouse Café in Smiths Falls and The Wedgewood in Brockville for being the first organizations on board for this campaign.

If you are a bakery, restaurant, or café owner, you can sign up for the Dining for Dementia campaign this year, which we hope to expand each January going forward. Contact Sarah at <scavanagh@alzllg.ca> for more information.

Dementia Friendly Communities

As part of the National Day of Action on January 28 to spark visibility and community engagement, we are offering free Dementia Friendly Communities training in person at our Smiths Falls office (179 Elmsley St. N., Unit 155) or virtually via zoom on January 28 at 10AM or 6PM. A Dementia Friendly Community is a place where people living with dementia are understood, respected, and supported. It is an environment where they will feel more confident in their abilities to contribute to community life, will be included in conversations, and have a choice and control over their day-to-day lives.

People with dementia and their care partners have the right to live well in the community, together. As more people are diagnosed every year and choose to live at home, we need to determine how we can better support people living with dementia.

Join thousands of Ontarians in showing your support for people living with dementia and their care partners. Together, we can create a Dementia Friendly Community. Contact Robin at <rhull@alzllg.ca> to register!

Health Hub

We are excited to announce that in 2026 we will be developing a Dementia Health Hub in Smiths Falls. This hub will be a one-stop site for caregivers to bring their loved one living with dementia to receive health services that they may need. It is our way to continue to support families and care partners and help reduce the stress that is often associated with general appointments (for example, hair and foot care, hearing and eye tests).

The Alzheimer Society Lanark Leeds Grenville is a charity that operates free and low-cost programming, education, respite and support groups throughout Lanark, Leeds, and Grenville. We have offices in Carleton Place, Almonte, Smiths Falls, Perth and Brockville.

We encourage everyone to follow us on social media (facebook.com/AlzheimerSocietyLLG or instagram.com/almersocietyllg) or sign up for our newsletter to stay informed about free education, local programs, services, and opportunities to support local families.

If you're interested in making a positive impact on those affected by Alzheimer's in your community, either as an individual participant or a business sponsor, please contact Sarah Cavanagh at <scavanagh@alzllg.ca>.

The Perfect Garden...

In the long winter months, I don't spend all my time salivating over glossy seed catalogues and planning next season's perfect garden. I must confess that I spend many happy hours reading murder mysteries, in particular British crime fiction. In addition to enjoying descriptions of plants that I cannot successfully grow in the Ottawa Valley, I love encounters between British sleuths and old duffers in their garden allotments. The detectives find that the allotment gardeners make the most reliable witnesses. They are "in the moment", connected to their surroundings, and notice what goes on around them. I feel something similar as I connect with growing plants and am able to still the craziness in my head.

by David Hinks

Taking a break from ways to poison my adversaries, I focus on seed catalogues that fuel fantasies of the most amazingly productive vegetable garden imaginable. It is time to get practical. Am I going to have a tomato crop with the best-tasting heritage variety, or should I pick the new hybrid with all kinds of disease resistance? Perhaps a compromise — grow some of each!

Why go to all the effort of ordering seeds and then growing tender little seedlings under lights when you can just pick up plants from the closest box store? It is really a matter of choice. Garden centres tend to have very limited selection, often not even listing the name of the variety. For example, I want information about days to harvest, taste characteristics, and disease resistance.

After four months of winter, gardeners are understandably eager to plant some seeds. But this is a case where timing is critical! The length of time seedlings can grow indoors before they need to be planted in the outdoor garden varies considerably. Melons, squash and cucumbers only need four to six weeks; broccoli and cabbage five to eight weeks; tomatoes six to eight weeks; peppers and eggplant eight to ten weeks; celery, parsley, onions and leeks ten to twelve weeks.

Similarly, frost-tolerant veggies such as onions, leeks and brassicas (cabbage family) can go into the garden in the first week of May, but frost-tender seedlings such as tomatoes, peppers and eggplants will not want to be transplanted outdoors until the last week of May.

So if we are exercising restraint, our seed-planting schedule should look something like this: onions and leeks mid-February; brassicas, peppers and eggplant mid-March; tomatoes first week of April; cucumbers and melons mid-April.

I have tried starting peas, corn and beans early indoors, but have found virtually no benefit — they are just so much happier growing directly from seed planted in the garden. Also, root vegetables such as beets and carrots do not transplant well. Peas can be planted directly in the ground probably by mid-April; carrots and beets by the first week of May; and corn and beans close to Victoria Day.

The approach to growing seedlings that I am describing is one that has worked well for me for several decades; however, many other approaches are possible — plants are pretty flexible.

The key to growing seedlings successfully indoors is lots of light. If plants don't have enough light, they will be spindly and weak and will not be able to handle the transition to outdoor conditions. I use artificial light as I have found that even a very sunny window is unlikely to provide sufficient light — although I do know some successful window-sill gardeners.

The set-up does not need to be fancy or pricey. I use utility wooden shelving and suspend fluorescent fixtures by chains between the shelves so that I can adjust them to keep them within a couple of inches of the seedlings. Used fluorescent fixtures are available for next to nothing at garage sales. I use only the cheapest four-foot fluorescent tubes, as my results have been just as good as with special "grow" tubes. On the other hand, some gardeners spend many hundreds of dollars on LED full-spectrum lights and nicely built stands.

I try to do one-step planting — for example, I use plug trays with 39 cells and put one seed in each cell. The other approach is to put a bunch of seeds in a small container and then transplant into larger pots or cells. I use a commercial seedling medium that I moisten well before filling the cells. Is a heat-mat required? I generally use them only for seeds that prefer warmer temperatures to germinate, including peppers and eggplants.

I turn on the lights first thing in the morning and turn them off when I go to bed. I water only when the growing medium is dry to the touch but before the seedlings wilt, and then drain off any excess water that has not been absorbed in a couple of hours — watering from the bottom is preferable.

Seeds contain all the nutrients required for germination. I use a diluted organic fish-based fertilizer weekly after seedlings have been growing for a few weeks.

Seedlings are very vulnerable to viral diseases — commonly called "damping off" — which causes apparently healthy plants to topple over from the base and die. I have found that this is virtually eliminated by using a commercial seedling medium, new plastic cells/plugs, and ensuring good air circulation by keeping a fan running constantly. The air movement also produces stronger, stockier plants.

Vine crops such as cucumbers and melons do not like to have their roots disturbed when they are transplanted, but they do benefit from an early start, so I start them in biodegradable pots that I can plant directly in the garden.

One thing I do after planting the seeds is to maintain charts of what I have planted — both indoors and outdoors. At times I supplement this with labels, but I find that these get lost, move or fade. No job is finished until the paperwork is done!

It is also necessary to harden-off seedlings before moving them to the garden by giving them gradual exposure to outdoor conditions. As I transplant these lush green growing plants into the garden, it seems miraculous to me that just two or three months ago they started from small hard apparently lifeless objects!

RCMP Pipes, Drums and Dancers to Play Perth & District Collegiate Institute

Mark your calendars for Saturday, March 28 for "An Afternoon of Pipes, Fiddles, Jigs and Reels" featuring the RCMP Pipes, Drums and Dancers with special musical guests The Oakfield Players and the Celtic band Shabraque. This lively event starts at 2:30 in the Mason Auditorium at Perth and District Collegiate Institute, and is presented by generous local sponsors Oakfield Park, Coutts Coffee Roastery & Café, Riverwood Pizza Company and the Perth Academy of Building Arts & Science, along with support from media partner myFM Perth 88.1.

The Royal Canadian Mounted Police (RCMP) Pipes, Drums and Dancers of the National Capital Region was formed in the year 2000 and is one of eight RCMP pipe bands across Canada. Wearing the distinctive RCMP tartan and the world-renowned red serge, the band is comprised primarily of citizen volunteers but also includes police officers and employees of the force. They are led by Pipe Major Iain Tait, who was been decorated by both the Governor General and the RCMP Commissioner for his service.

The band performs regularly for the public in support of both regional and community endeavours as well as for RCMP ceremonial events. As part of its official duties, they have performed for many heads-of-state including King Charles III and other members of the Royal Family. The band has toured extensively, representing both Canada and the RCMP while performing at international events across North America as well as in Europe and China. Most recently, the RCMP Pipes, Drums and Dancers toured The Netherlands for the celebrations marking the 80th anniversary of the liberation from Nazi-occupation, playing to sold-out crowds at concert halls as well as leading Canadian representation at parades and local events attracting hundreds of thousands of Dutch citizens. The band has also accepted an invitation to perform at the Eksjo Tattoo in Sweden in July of 2026. Find more information at rcmppipesanddrums.com.

Shabraque is a Celtic stage band that grew out of the RCMP Pipes, Drums and Dancers several years ago. This 19th century term was given to the saddlecloth used by the British Army's famous Household Cavalry and carried over to the Royal Canadian Mounted Police. The RCMP horses traditionally feature a black shabraque with yellow trim. Comprised of string instruments and soloists, Shabraque performs high-energy toe-tapping jigs and reels originating from Scotland, Ireland and the east coast of Canada. Most of the musicians are also members of the pipe band. Audiences are encouraged to sing along for an intimate kitchen-party experience featuring familiar timeless folk songs. Check out their Facebook page for more details.

The Oakfield Players are a group of talented local artists who perform kitchen-party style during "Traditional Sundays" throughout the winter at Oakfield Park. Fiddles, harps and guitars are just a few of the musical instruments that are enjoyed in the clubhouse by those who drop by to tap their toes to the jigs and reels while sitting by the roaring stone fireplace, perhaps savouring a pint, glass of wine or a wee dram.

Oakfield Park is located on County Road 10 (North Street) 9 kilometres east of Perth. It was built on a simple belief: that when people gather with intention, they create ripples of impact that can last for generations. Oakfield Park was born in 2018 to create a home for rugby in Lanark County as well as a community meeting place where friendships could form, conversations could flow, and connection could flourish. What began as a field of dreams and a spirit of volunteerism has grown into something far bigger. Today, Oakfield Park is a dynamic destination for corporate retreats, weddings, field rentals, community celebrations, and of course, the sport that started it all.

In addition to The Oakfield Players on winter afternoons, the clubhouse hosts monthly concerts in an intimate setting by professional musicians from the Perth-area, Canada, the U.S. and across the pond. For more information on Oakfield Park and upcoming performances, check out oakfieldpark.ca.

Tickets for the March 28 concert at PDCI are available from Tickets Please (TicketsPlease.ca, 485-6434). For concert information, inquire at concert@rcmppipesanddrums.com.
